The story is about Emma, (played by Senior, Skylar Musa), a wealthy young woman scheming to play matchmaker to her new friend Harriet (played by Junior, Sara McCauliff) to the town's unsuspecting bachelors. The story takes place in rural England in the 1800's. While trying to run the lives and loves of the people around her and being a bad matchmaker, she overlooks their true feelings for each other and ignores her own. HERE AND THERE
As we've mentioned before, February has almost as many 'special day' celebrators as it has days. The 13 people named below will be blowing out candles between Feb. 7 - 14 (the first one may need a little help!): Edith Porter, in Neversink will be 93 on Feb. 7! Also, on Feb. 7, Supervisor Greg Goldstein and Kacie Mae Allison (daughter of Jon and Chris) - she'll be 11; we didn't ask Greg; also on Feb 7, up in Troy, Doug and Marilyn Hasbrouck can count 52 years together. On Feb. 8, our neighbor, Penny Hennessey, and Janie Buckman of Woodbourne; Feb. 9. Wendy (Smith) Hyndman out in Michigan Feb. 9, Wendy (Smith) Hyndman out in Michigan now catches up with same-age friends Dawne and Ellen (on last week's list); that's also the two-year anniversary for Mark and Paula McCarthy. Martha Ahrens, still waiting for that broken elbow to heal, will celebrate on Feb. 10. On Feb. 11, Mickie Costa and Erica Costa - unrelated - will both add a year, which makes Erica 19; also Joshua Thomas Smith, grandson of Thomas and June, turns 21 think (can't read my own writing). And on Feb. 14, Don Terwilliger is a birthday Valentine (that's what Wanda calls him).

P.S: Last week I took a year away from Cheyenne Hennessey, but this week I'm giving it aback to her, she's 15, not 14. Many happy returns to all!

Our community has been saddened this past weekend by the passing of Annabelle Roberts, who, at 62, finally lost her gallant struggle against a determined disease. (The name Annabelle surprised me; I had always beard her called Ann or Annie by friends had always heard her called Ann or Annie by friends and co-workers.) All who knew her join in extending condolences to her family and loved ones

That's it for this week, for two reasons: 1) We have no other items of general interest to share with you (hint, hint, hint!); and 2) it's cold! Try to stay warm this week!(pah) ...

OPENING EVENT PARTY FOR SHOW BY CAROL PEPPER-COOPER ELLENVILLE REGIONAL HOSPITAL

Carol Pepper-Cooper is the featured artist in Ellenville Regional Hospital's ongoing "Healing Art Gallery" program. The show, which runs until February 26th is free and open to the public!

An Opening Night event is scheduled for Thursday, February 11, 2010 from 5:00-7:00pm and all are welcome! Refreshments will be served

Carol Pepper-Cooper has been making art for the past 50 years. During that time she has used a variety of media and has produced both representational and non-objective work, from small etchings to massive stage sets. The work in this exhibit spans many years, and although it omits her more vividly imagined works, it (Next Col.)

suggests some of the distance she has traveled.
While Pepper-Cooper was growing up near Manhattan's Metropolitan Museum of Art, which she visited regularly, she was most influenced by the work of Van Gogh, Gauguin and Rembrandt. She attended Radcliffe College, Harvard University, graduating magna cum laude in English. While studying for her MFA at Pratt Institute, her mentor, George McNeil, introduced her to Abstract Expressionism and to Hans Hofmann's concept of space and the push-pull of the colors that create it.
All her work is informed by that concept, often within a dream-like context. Recently she has been developing a series of paintings related to the flow of time passing, works which are haunted by the transience of all things physical,,-including the earth and all who live on it.

The lyrical, sinuous line characterizing Pepper-Cooper's work, along with the luminous color for which she is known, can be seen in the three, 7 foot high stained glass windows she designed for Kingston's Temple Emanuel. Pepper-Cooper has shown her work throughout the Hudson Valley, in Westchester and in New York City, winning numer-ous awards and citations. Her work is in collections throughout the country and in Israel.

Effenville Regional Hospital is located on Route 209 in Ellenville. For more information about the Healing Art exhibit or the Ellenville Regional Hospital, please contact (845) 210-3043.

SPIRALS AND SPURS By Peggy DeWire

"How do tree limbs know when to stop growing longer?" Fred asked me as we crossed his backyard at the end of our hike.

"Let's go over to that apple tree and find out, "I said as we mushed through the snow and stood looking up at it.

We noticed how the limbs grew off the trunk at an angle and how the tree had a typical round shape while a nearby pine was a triangle.

I remarked that a tree grows out of the ground in a spiral to the pre-programmed height and width of its family type. Just like your body, Fred, has genes that control how tall and how big you'll finally get.

As the tree spirals upward, every branch grows from the trunk at a fixed angle which is repeated by all smaller limbs, then twigs and lastly, leaves.
This is called the "universal spiral" which you can see in snail shells, spider webs, rams horns and the outer plates on pineapples. Can you think of more spiral things in nature?

A spiral allows growth in a mathematical ratio of 3.1416 or pi so that each whorl is related to the next in size. Artists call this expanding pattern "dynamic

If you let your eye move up the apple tree from branch to branch, noting the angle where they leave the trunk, you'll see it's always the same and keeps the limbs growing parallel. This maintains the tree's overall shape, as pre-programmed. There's one more control I'm coming to.

The tree spiral can be distorted by poor light con-ditions or wind damage but new limbs always develop at the proper angle succession to expand the spi-

So, Fred, to answer your question of how branches know when to stop growing, I want you to look at this ordinary twig at the end of its own spiral. Now look back from the end bud along the twig at the winter buds arranged in a neat spiral pattern.

But what's this! An ugly stubby twig in the wrong place! It's a spur that opens its end bud, putting out leaves and flowers but no extenders! Every year that spur makes a rough bark ring on the twig and the number of rings show its age. This spur has three rings and is about two inches long, so it took three years of retarded growth to grow two inches.

Apple trees go for the spur method to hold back branches and keep the tree's symmetry.

So do cherry, birch and larch. Other trees such as tulip and oak let underbranches just die off. Nature has two patterns for tree growth - spiral and opposite. That is, two branches twigs and leaf buds are always located exactly across from each other on

Maple, ash and dogwood use this design to give their leaves greatest exposure to sunlight without

Some opposite pattern trees form spurs to maintain their symmetry and compactness

Why trees make spurs instead of long twigs at the right time and place to build the best-shaped tree remains a mystery yet.

I left Fred rushing around from pine tree to apple tree finding spurs.

He waved goodbye and thanks for showing him something to discover in his wintertime backyard.

PERSONAL VEHICLE USE COSTS COUNTY OVER $340,000.00 COMP-TROLLER Measure 2 Manage REPORT ON MILEAGE REIMBURSEMENT

Ulster County Comptroller Elliott Auerbach released his second Measure 2 Manage Report for 2010. This one high-lighting annual mileage expenses reimbursed to county employees using their personally owned vehicles while on county business.

"Over the past three years County employees have travelled over 600,000 miles a year with the county spending an average of $347,000 in mileage reimburse-ments annually," said Auerbach. "A large portion of that expense is directed at two departments in the county, Social Services and Public Health," the Comptroller point-

"While Ulster County owns a fleet of vehicles for use by staff, there may be an under utilization of the resources that result in the high cost of reimbursement." "We expect this data to initiate analysis by departments regarding the economy, effec-tiveness and efficiency of the use of County vehicles as compared to the costs of reimbursement for mileage of personally-owned vehicles," explained Auerbach.

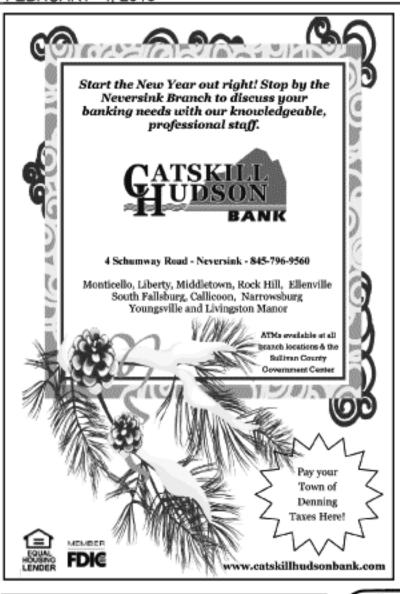

The report data provides both the number of miles traveled and the cost of those miles to the County, by department or office, for the period January 1 - June 30, 2007, 2008 and 2009.

The report includes two spreadsheets. One reflects trends over time and comparison between departments. The second pro-vides detail to support departmental level analysis.

Auerbach noted that in sharing this report with the County Executive and the Legislature he raised concerns regarding the lack of a Personal Vehicle Use Policy which would address issues of responsibility and authority including vehicle ownership, condition and adequacy of insurance coverage.

"We want to ensure that both the County and its employees are adequately protected, especially those who carry passengers in the line of duty. Likewise, we believe the County can better manage its expenses by instituting a Personal Vehicle Use Policy," said Auerbach.

The Measure 2 Manage series of reports are snap shots portraying the use of County resources designed to help Ulster County departments and offices manage their resources.

PIGSKINS...

AND FLYING BUFFALOS!

From its rudimentary beginnings, football, as well as rugby and soccer, were believed to have descended from the ancient Greek game of harpaston that is mentioned frequently in classical literature. The actual 'invention' of football goes back as far as the 11th century in England. During those days the football was an inflated lder, usually from a pig. In the days bladder, usually from a pig. In the days before vulcanized rubber, it was easy to obtain animal bladders, that were round and quite durable and could be inflated and used as a ball. As the years passed, some ingenious persons covered the bladder with leather for added protection. Believe it ious persons covered the bladder with leather for added protection. Believe it or not, this was a great improvement from the earlier English "football" that was a leather easting stuffed with hay or cork shavings.

Once intercollegiate football began in 1869, Charles Goodyear was already on the scene, having patented vulcanization of rubber in 1844. The pig's bladder began to fade from the football field and rubber bladders began to fill the pigskin's in 1871, however, the 'football' was still a spherical shape and not the prolate spheroid, or round but pointy ball that is used today.

According to Henry Duffield, who attended a Princeton Rutgers game in 1869, it seemed that too often the game had to be stopped, the ball taken to the side line where it had to be re-inflated. Some thought was then given to a more conducive shape that would handle the stress of the game and the football evolved into a watermelon-shaped ball. By 1906 passing the 'football' became a lot easier when the rules committee ordered the watermelon-shaped ball to a lot easier when the rules committee ordered the watermelon-shaped ball to be slimmed down on the ends by an inch and a half. Thank goodness, the Iyy Leaguers of yesteryear ran out of wind, or the rules of today's game may be totally different!

Not long after the Civil War, colleges began organizing football games and now, over 100 years since the inception of the NCAA, the sport of college football flourishes as one of the most popular of collegiate games.

Walter Camp of New Haven, Connecticut, who attended Yale and was the chairman of the Yale football committee from 1888-1912 helped to implement the rules taking the game away from the Rugby and Soccer rules into the rules of the American Football as we know them today. Walter Camp contributed the following changes: one side retained undisputed possession of the ball, until that side gives up the ball as a result of its own violations; the line of scrim-mage; 11 on a team instead of 15; created the quarter-back and center positions; forward pass; standardized the scoring system, numerical scoring; created the safety, interference, penalties, and the neutral zone; tackling as low as the knee was permitted - 1888; a touchdown increased in value to six points and field goals went down to three points - 1912

Professional football was first played soon after the demise of the Intercollegiate Football Association, around 1895. By 1920, the American Professional Football Association was formed; one year later it was reorganized and in 1922, was renamed the National Football League. A merger in 1970, 75 years after the inception of the first pro football association, combined 16 NFL teams with 10 AFL teams to comprise one league with two conferences. In the 1980's, further expansion was proposed and by the 1993-94 NFL season, approval was given for a thirty-team league.

When American football began in the late 1800's, there was also a decline of the buffelor reaming in the west. It became quite apparent the buffelor was

When American football began in the late 1800's, there was also a decline of the buffalos roaming in the west. It became quite apparent the buffalo was on the verge of extinction. With the help of Teddy Roosevelt, Congress established a number of wildlife preserves for buffalos in 1905. As a result buffalos are once again flourishing and roaming in the USA. Ironically, also in 1905, President Roosevelt summoned representatives of the Big Three to the White House. They were Harvard, Yale and Princeton, the universities who first played the game and set the rules of play for football. In his best table-thumping style, Theodore Roosevelt convinced them that the rules needed to be changed to climinate the foul play and brutality. As a result ed to be changed to eliminate the foul play and brutality. As a result, the American Football Rules Committee was formed and football was also preserved. Football today, now includes many other traditions. TV commercials have become a large part of the competition. Super Bowl Sunday is perhaps known as the biggest party day of the year in the United States with a lot of servings of Buffalo wings with RED hot sauce, and a WHITE, BLUE cheese dressing - what could be more

American than that?

While both the football game and the buffalo are part of the US history, it is time to celebrate Super Bowl Sunday and Flying Buffalos from Buffalo, New York! Where else did you think we got those delicious Buffalo Wings from? Have a Happy Super Bowl Sunday and may the best team win!

RENAISSANCE MERCHANT DISCOUNTS Sullivan County Chamber Invites Businesses To Offer Beautification Savings

Local businesses are being invited to support community beautification projects throughout Sullivan County by becoming part of the Sullivan Renaissance Merchant Discount Program, now in its Earlier this month the Sullivan County Chamber of Commerce sent a letter to its members asking them to offer discounts - typically 10% to 20% or more – on products and services used to clean up and beautify communities. "This is a really good approach," said Chamber President Terri Ward, "Renaissance groups are able to stretch their resources while keeping the dollars local and at the same time merchants are able to increase their business. Everyone wins.'

Sullivan Renaissance offers grants that provide community and school groups with seed money for beautification and spruce up projects. Grant amounts range up to $5000 depending on the project. The discount program helps this money go farther, while encouraging local spending.

Merchants set the savings amounts and are given a list of participants. Project leaders are given special cards to identify that the items they are purchasing will be used for Renaissance projects. Stores are publicized in flyers, news releases and on the Sullivan Renaissance website [www.sullivanrenais-

To register for the program, individuals should contact the Sullivan County Chamber of Commerce at 845-791-4200 or Sullivan Renaissance at 845-295-2452. Businesses do not need to be chamber members to participate.

SENATOR BONACIC PROPOSES JOB CREATION PLAN FOR SMALL BUSI-NESSES- Plan Would Give Tax Credits to Businesses Which Create Jobs, Enact State Spending Cap to Help Improve Overall Economic Climate

New York State Senator John J. Bonacic (R/I/C Mt. Hope) recently announced a new plan to help create jobs for local residents and provide desperately needed relief for small business

Putting people back to work is the best way to help our economy improve. This plan would help create new jobs by giving small businesses financial incentives and reducing their tax burden. With the Hudson Valley losing over 35,000 jobs last year alone, this plan is absolutely vital to our eco-nomic recovery," said Senator Bonacic.

"Despite spending billions of dollars in federal stimulus monies last year, New York lost 269,000jobs. Obviously, what this state is doing hasn't been working."

The job creation and tax relief initiative will help local small businesses create jobs by lowering business costs and giving them financial incentives to hire new employees. In addition, the plan would provide attractive incentives for new companies to relocate to New York, bringing additional jobs for local residents.

The plan would:

* Provide Tax Credits for Creating New Jobs: Give New York employers a recurring three-year tax credit of up to $5,000 for every new job created. Credit would be equal to 100% of the withholding generated from each new job, up to a maximum of $5,000. Credit would apply only to new jobs that expand total payroll. The credit could increase by as much as an additional $3,000 per job if the new hires are taken from the ranks of the unemployed who are collecting state unemployment funds. This incentive would help reduce unemployment costs to the state, saving taxpayers

* Reduce Taxes on Small Businesses: Lower the cost of doing business in New York State by providing business tax relief. The plan would create a five year moratorium on any new taxes or fees on small businesses and manufacturers and accelerate the phase-out of the 2009 personal income tax increase for small businesses. In addition, the plan eliminates the corporate franchise tax for hundreds of small businesses and manufacturers with 50 or fewer employees and less than $2 million in net income. Reducing costs will help small businesses grow and create jobs for local residents.

* Cut the Red Tape: To help reduce bureaucratic red tape on small businesses, the plan would impose a five year moratorium on new business regulations from state agencies. The plan would also create a new commission to identify and make binding recommendations about ways to streamline and/or eliminate the most costly and counter-productive regulations.

* Enact a Cap on State Spending: The plan would impose a constitutional cap on state spending to help ensure the state lives within its fiscal means, which will improve the state's overall economic climate. Senator Bonacic has repeatedly called on Albany to enact a state spending cap. Governor Paterson has also advocated for a state spending cap.

Business groups were quick to weigh in withpraise for the Senate Republican plan. "Small business is the engine that drives most job creation in our economy-and that will grow us out of this economic mess. Lowering New York's, second worst in the nation, business tax climate, and cost of doing business is really what small business needs to survive and grow, and that's exactly what this job creation plan will do. The proposal put forth today by the Senate Republican Conference is the right recipe for expanding our economy and deserves bipartisan support in both houses o fthe Legislature," said Mike Elmendorf, New York State Director of the National Federation of Independent Business (NFIB), New York's leading small business advocacy association. Senator Bonacic is urging Governor Paterson to adopt the measure.

HINCHEY STATEMENT ON PRESIDENT STATE OF THE UNION OBAMA'S ADDRESS

Congressman Maurice Hinchey (D-NY) released the following statement in response to President Obama's State of the Union address.

I stand ready to work with President Obama to help continue moving our country along the path of recovery by creating jobs, providing relief to middle class Americans, and laying the groundwork for long-term economic prosperity while also securing final passage of a comprehensive health care reform The economic circumstances in this country are certainly better than they were a year ago, but far too many Americans are struggling to get by and those of us in Congress must continue to work aggressively to provide a helping hand. Through sustained investments in our country's own internal needs, though not through any particular budget freeze, we can and will fully recover and improve the quality of life for Americans.

"I share the president's commitment to creating jobs and have been aggressively working to lay the foundation for new businesses and technologies in New York, particularly in the renewable energy sector, to take off and become major employers in our state. At the same time we're laying the foundation for long-term job growth, we're also working to support those individuals and families who have been hit hard by the economic downturn through a combination of policies, including extended unemployment and COBRA insurance, increased college tuition assistance, and expanded aid to help pay for child care as well as care for elderly loved ones. We also need to pass a substantial piece of health care reform legislation so that the daunting financial burden that so many Americans face in the form of skyrocketing health care is finally lifted.

"In order to accomplish all of these important things we need to ensure that the legislative process is transparent and functions properly. The U.S. Supreme Court's ruling last week that effectively allows major corporations to buy elections underscores the need for dramatic reform that will ensure the voices of the people are heard and represented, not those of the special interests. Combined with reigning in Wall Street's outrageous practices and bonus giveaways at the expense of taxpayers, we'll be taking concrete steps in Congress to end the undue influence and power that an elite few hold over honest, hard-working Americans.
"In addition to economic priorities at home, we must continue to ensure that our country is secure from threats at home and around the world. Through smart policies and sound investments in homeland security and improved relationships with other countries, we can do a much better job of keeping our country safe. With regard to military policy, I was very pleased to see the president call for the repeal of "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" -- a discriminatory policy that never should have been adopted in the first place.

"The damage from reckless domestic and for-eign policies of the past are still being felt today, but we would be far worse off were it not for many of the steps we've already taken. There remains an enormous amount of work to be done to help the many Americans who are still hurting. I am com-mitted to working with President Obama and my colleagues in Congress to enact significant reforms that will make real, positive differences for the people of our country."

HINCHEY, TSEC, & NATIONAL GUARD OFFICIALS ANNOUNCE NEW $4 MIL-LION FEDERAL INVESTMENT TO CON-STRUCT SOLAR FARM AT STEWART AIR NATIONAL GUARD BASE -Congressman Secured Funds to Make Local National Guard Base More Secure and Energy Efficient; ANG Project Will Serve as a Model for Military Installations across the County Congressman Maurice Hinchey (D-NY), offi-cials from The Solar Energy Consortium (TSEC) and its partners, and representatives from Stewart Air National Guard (ANG) base today announced a new $4 million dollar federal investment that will pay for the construction of a solar farm at the base. Hinchey directly secured the funds from Congress as part of the fiscal year 2010 Defense Appropriations bill, which has been signed into

"The Hudson Valley is leading the way on the development and practical use of solar products across our region and the country," Hinchey said. This project demonstrates how solar energy can be used right now to make our military installations more secure, cost-effective, energy efficient, and environmentally sound. The solar farm project at Stewart Air National Guard base will serve as a model for other military installations across the country and demonstrate that on-base use of solar panels is a cost effective solution that will allow the Department of Defense -- the world's number one consumer of energy -- to become much more energy efficient and dramatically less dependent on the use of fossil fuels.

Over the life of the solar farm, the project will save taxpayer money, make Stewart ANG base more secure, and enable the facility to become more energy independent. Once completed, the solar farm at Stewart ANG base will serve as a model for other military installations across the country. Congress and the Pentagon have set new requirements that each branch of the military must purchase or generate a minimum of 25 percent of the energy they consume from renewable sources by 2025. MEET CAPTAIN DONALD VAN KEUREN-U.S. AIR FORCE

Captain Donald Van Keuren, a native of Neversink, and a son of Frank Van Keuren and the late Della Dice Van Keuren, recently returned to the United States with his wife and children after being stationed for two years in Yalova, a village about 90 miles from Istanbul, Turkey. There his wife kept house and his four daughters, Lynn, Cathy, Donna and Robin learned geography at first hand along with the children of the other 100 families at the base, known as Kara Mursel.

Things were very primitive at first. The new houses, especially built for the Americans, leaked; the floors were icy cold and there were no screens. The wind blew through the walls.

There was no school and the Van Keuren children with others were ferried across the Bosporus very early in the morning to the school for American dependents. It was around 6 P.M. when they came home. If the weather was bad they had to stay with friends.

Mrs. Van Keuren picked up the language faster than the children because she had to shop in the native market. Vegetables were good, plentiful and cheap. The farmers brought them in by horse, donkey, oxen or buffalo. They had to be washed in chlorine water before they were cooked. Eggs were always available, but dirty. Chickens and turkeys (hindi) could be had, but were thin and scrawny.

Beef and lamb were on the market, but carcasses hung in the open, exposed to flies and dirt. The butcher would cut off a chunk using an enormous stump for his chopping block. Meat, too, had to be thoroughly cleansed and cooked before it was safe to eat it. Only occasionally were they able to get milk and then it was

WITH DROPPING TEMPERATURES AND RISING ENERGY COSTS, GILLI-BRAND CALLS ON OBAMA TO SEND ALL AVAILABLE HOME HEATING ASSISTANCE RESOURCES FOR NEW YORK -$100 Million Yet To Be Released For LIHEAP In Cold-Climate States

3 Million New Yorkers Rely On Heating Oil

To Heat Their Homes In The Winter

Washington, DC - With dropping temperatures and rising energy costs, U.S. Senator Kirsten Gillibrand today called on President Obama to release an additional $100 million in Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) funding that cold-climate states like

New York need and were promised. Last month, Senator Gillibrand helped secure $5.1 billion for the program that helps seniors and low-income families heat their homes during the winter months. An additional $45 million was sent to New York in LIHEAP contingency funds earlier this

Now. Senator Gillibrand is calling on President Obama to release the remaining $100 million in LIHEAP funding that the Department of Health and Human Services secured for cold-climate states.

"No New York family should ever be left in the cold," Senator Gillibrand said. "But with the bad economy, job losses and rising energy costs, too many New York families struggle to heat their homes and stay warm. We need to make sure we're putting every resource available to use so that all New York families can stay warm this winter."

At the end of last year, Senator Gillibrand helped pass the Omnibus Appropriations bill for this year, including $5.1 billion in HEAP fund-ing - the largest amount Congress has ever allocated for the program that helps seniors and lowincome families heat their homes for the winter. New York State is expected to receive more than $475 million in HEAP grants and more than $60 million for disaster relief and other emergencies. An additional $45 million in LIHEAP

Contingency funds has also been secured for New York to make sure that in these extremely difficult economic times, every New York family can access the resources they need to stay warm this winter. To take the next step, Senator Gillibrand is join-ing with her Senate colleagues asking President to release every remaining resource for LIHEAP now when New York families need it most. (Contd. Pg.

HINCHEY, TSEC, & NATIONAL GUARD OFFICIALS (From Pg. 12)

The Stewart Air National Guard base solar farm, which will be the largest solar initiative in the Hudson Valley, will create approximately 10-20 jobs during the yearlong construction build out period. TSEC will serve as the program manager to build the solar farm utilizing Applied Materials thin-film solar PV technology. Applied Materials is a global leader in building the tool sets used to manufacture solar panels. It is anticipated that the solar farm will provide a significant portion of the daylight electri-cal power needs for the Stewart Air National Guard facility -- roughly the amount of power needed for 100 average-sized four bedroom homes.

The Stewart Air National Guard Solar farm will provide clean grid free power to Stewart and also serve as a catalyst toward growing the military and commercial market for the solar PV industry in New York and across the United States," said TSEC

President Vincent Cozzolino . Brigadier General Verle L. Johnston, Jr., base commander at the Stewart Air National Guard facility said, "On behalf of Stewart Air National Guard base we want to thank Congressman Hinchey for securing the funding to construct this solar farm, which allows us to generate electrical power right on the base and play a constructive role in achieving overall U.S. Air Force mandates to purchase or generate 25 percent of the energy the Air Force con-sumes from renewable sources by 2025."

According to a 2008 Defense Science Board (DSB) Task Force report on energy strategy, about 85 percent of energy infrastructure upon which the military depends is commercially owned and 99 percent of it resides outside installation gates. Most of this capability is connected to the national grid which is aging and vulnerable to natural disasters and intentional attack. As a result, military installations are susceptible to not being able to carry out mission-critical functions in the event of a long-term grid outage. Most installation back-up generation systems are diesel-powered generators that are nei-ther environmentally friendly nor viable long-term back-up solutions.

"This project can also serve as a model for schools, hospitals, and other buildings that are looking to become much more energy efficient and cost effective," Hinchey said. "The investments we've made in the solar energy industry in New York are paying off in significant ways, and this solar farm project at Stewart Air National Guard base is just the latest example.

Hinchey has now secured more than $31 million in federal funds for TSEC and its partners. The congressman helped organize and create TSEC in 2007. The consortium is an industry-driven, non-profit organization that provides leadership, organization, resources, and support for the establishment of a major solar energy industry cluster in New York. The consortium has partnered with more than 70 small and large companies, including nearly a dozen that have already created 200 jobs in the Hudson Valley and collectively plan to bring more than 1,000 new jobs to upstate New York

GILLIBRAND FIGHTS TO EXTEND UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE FOR STRUGGLING NEW YORKERS

With the number of jobless claims and the cost of health insurance premiums on the rise, U.S. Senator Kirsten Gillibrand today pushed for an extension to unemployment insurance benefits and the COBRA Premium Assistance Program through the end of the year. More than 850,000 New Yorkers are out of work - with many relying on the assistance they receive from unemployment insurance benefits and the COBRA Premium Assistance Program. Without an extension, the benefits will expire on February

"Unemployment benefits and the COBRA Premium Assistance Program have been vital for families across New York," Senator Gillibrand said. "For many families, these two programs have provided their sole source of income, and their only way to afford health insurance. They can't afford to be cut off now. We need to make sure we're providing assistance for those hit hardest by this recession.

Unemployment still tops double digits with over 850,000 New Yorkers out of work. In addition to losing their jobs, many of these individuals also lost health insurance coverage for themselves and their families. Across the nation, nearly 40 percent of the unemployed - more than 6.1 million people - have been out of work for six months or longer.

Unemployment benefits are a lifeline for families and individuals to meet basic needs as they look for new jobs and the COBRA Premium Assistance Program helps cover the unemployed while they are between jobs - offering families basic, (Next Col.)

affordable health insurance.

On average, a monthly healthcare premium payment to cover a family costs $1,111 -- over 80 percent of the average unemployment check. In some states, the average unemployment check is less than the cost of a monthly health care plan premium. If the COBRA Premium Assistance Program is not extended, families across New York and across the United States will be unable to afford health care

Extending unemployment benefits would provide assistance to those who are still looking for jobs and give a lifeline to the unemployed as they battle to get back on track. The average duration of unemployment is now at 29.1 weeks -- with nearly 40 percent of the unemployed out of work for six months or longer, and with the jobless claims on the rise. Failure to extend unemployment insurance benefits and the COBRA Premium Assistance Program would set many New York families back when they can least afford it.

Senator Gillibrand joined a group of 17 Senators urging Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid (D-NV) and Finance Committee Chairman Max Baucus (D-MT) to pass legislation to make sure Americans still on the path to recovery continue getting the resources they need to get there.

GILLIBRAND ANNOUNCES $151 MIL-LION FOR HIGH-SPEED RAIL IN NEW YORK

U.S. Senator Kirsten Gillibrand today announced that New York State is receiving $151 million from the U.S. Department of Transportation to build new high-speed rail lines across New York.

"This is great news for New York," Senator Gillibrand said. "Building high-speed rail here will connect more commuters and businesses, create jobs immediately and help rebuild our economy for the long term. We've worked hard for a long time to bring high-speed rail to New York. This round of funding is just the first step in our efforts to secure what New York needs to achieve true high-speed rail connectivity. I will keep fighting to make sure New York gets more high speed rail funding in future

These funds are part of the initial $8 billion passed in the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act. Last month, Senator Gillibrand supported an additional $2.5 billion for high-speed rail capital projects. As the President finalizes his Budget for 2011, it is anticipated that additional funds will be requested.

Senator Gillibrand is working hard to deliver New York another round of federal investments to build our high-speed rail, connect more communities across the state, create jobs and continue driving our economic recovery.

IN MESSAGE TO PENTAGON LEADER-SHIP, GILLIBRAND, FORMER JOINT CHIEFS CHAIRMAN SAY IT'S TIME TO REPEAL "DON'T ASK DON'T TELL"

Top Military Leader Joins Broad, Growing Support To End Unjust, Harmful Policy

Washington, D.C. - Former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff General John Shalikashvili today joined U.S. Senator Kirsten Gillibrand's call for action to finally end "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" by issu-ing the following statement urging top leadership at the Department of Defense to move forward on repealing the policy: STATEMENT FROM GEN. SHALIKASHVILI:

Thank you for the opportunity to share my thoughts about the Policy Concerning Homosexuality in the Armed Forces. When I was Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, my support of the current policy was based on my belief that implementing a change in the rules would have been too burdensome for our troops and commanders at the time.

The concern among many at that time, was that ting people who were openly gay lower morale, harm recruitment and undermine unit cohesion. "Don't ask, don't tell" was seen as a useful measure that allowed time to pass while our culture continued to evolve. The question before us now is whether enough time has gone by to give this policy serious reconsideration. I believe that it has.

Recently, Army Secretary John McHugh said that "The Army has a big history of taking on simi-lar issues [with]...predictions of doom and gloom that did not play out." His conclusion echoes substantial scholarly and official military research which finds that allowing gays and lesbians to serve openly would not jeopardize readiness.

"Studies have shown that three-quarters of serv-ice members say they are personally comfortable around gays and lesbians. Two-thirds say they already know or suspect gay people in their units. This raises important questions about (Next Col.)

the assertion that openly gay service would impair the military. In fact, it shows that gays and lesbians in the military have already been accepted by the average soldier

'Additionally, at least twenty-five foreign militaries now let gays serve openly, including our closest ally, Britain. Although we lead rather than follow these militaries, there is no evidence suggesting that our troops cannot effectively carry out the same policy change as those nations did.

"In 2008, a bi-partisan panel of retired General and Flag officers carefully reviewed this matter for a year and concluded that repeal would not pose a risk to the military's high standards of morale, discipline, cohesion, recruitment, or retention. Interestingly, an increasing number of active-duty officers who have reviewed "don't ask, don't tell" indicate that the policy, not the presence of gays, is detrimental to the armed forces' need for skilled personnel who are able to serve without compromising their integrity and, by extension, that of the armed forces as a

"As a nation built on the principal of equality, we should recognize and welcome change that will build a stronger more cohesive military. It is time to repeal "don't ask, don't tell" and allow our mili-tary leaders to create policy that holds our service members to a single standard of conduct and disci-

Aaron Belkin, Director of the Palm Center said, "General Shalikashvili has answered the lingering question of when to repeal "Don't Ask, Don't Tell." The General says now. As one of only 17 people to hold the position of Chairman of the Joint Chiefs his statement is saying that not only is now the time to repeal this law, but that it will make our military stronger. This is an endorsement of the President's goals and a signal to the Pentagon - it is time for

GILLIBRAND: PRESIDENT'S HISTORIC CALL FOR REPEAL OF "DON'T ASK, DON'T TELL" BEGINS A NEW ERA OF EQUALITY AND JUSTICE IN AMERICA As Obama Outlines New Way Forward For Middle Classe. Genews Call For Job

Tax Cut To Help Middle Class

Job Creation Tax Cut Could Create More Than One

Million New Jobs

Washington, D.C. - As President Obama issues a his-toric call to repeal the military's "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" policy and unveils a new way forward for hardworking middle class families in his State of the Union Address, U.S. Senator Kirsten Gillibrand issued the following statement:

President Obama's call to repeal 'Don't Ask, Don't Tell' marks the beginning of a new era of equality and justice in America. The military's 'Don't Ask, Don't Fell' policy is an unfair, outdated measure that violates the civil rights of some of our bravest, most heroic men and women. We must all join together to speak up on behalf of the brave men and women who want to serve their country.
"With unemployment above 10 percent and New York families struggling to make ends meet, now is the time for the aggressive action to create middle class jobs.

"We need solutions that will target where the need is greatest - middle and working class families struggling to keep and find jobs and small businesses in need of capital investment. Bush-era ideas of trickledown economics and corporate giveaways with no string attached will neither help small businesses or middle class New Yorkers.

"Congress must act now to provide businesses with an incentive to hire to get our economy moving again.

"And we can't stop there. The President has laid out a broad range of proposals that will provide middle class New Yorkers with real relief by cutting taxes to make child care affordable, raising the caregiver tax credit so families can care for their elderly loved ones, and extending the tuition tax credit so more New York students can pursue their dreams and get a college education.

'It's time to focus on the middle class and those struggling in this economy by creating new jobs and putting more New Yorkers back to work right now.

"Finally, we must not give up and remain commit-ted to passing the President's health care reforms, which would provide quality care to 2.7 million New Yorkers who don't have health insurance, cut taxes for small businesses, and lower costs for everyone else.

According to a recent study by the Congressional Budget Office (CBO), a tax cut for businesses that create new jobs would garner just as much economic return as spending on new infrastructure, and be more effective at creating jobs. In fact, the Economic Policy Institute estimates that Senator Gillibrand's legislation could care more than one million jobs in one year alone. (Contd. Pg. 15)

"Goeff, Debbie, Joseph, & Max Cabrera lest their home and all of their belongings in a fire on Rocky Hill Road in Grahammille on Pesamber 30th. WITH DROPPING TEMPERATURES AND RISING ENERGY COSTS (From Pg. 13)
Senator Gillibrand has also introduced new legislation payroll increase over the previous year, meaning to provide low interest loans and tax credits to help cover the costs of energy, as well as providing a guidebook for families and businesses to help navigate federal grant programs and take advantage of funding available to heat and weatherize homes, schools and businesses.

The cost of heating oil in New York is the second highest in the nation at approximately $2.46 per gallon. Approximately 3 million New Yorkers rely on heating oil to heat their homes in the winter - making New York particularly vulnerable to shortages and price hikes as a result of extremely high demand.

Nearly $320 million was provided in nearly 1.3 million direct checks to New Yorkers to heat their homes in 2008 - an increase of nearly 415,000 from two years prior.

GILLIBRAND (From Pg. 14)

Specifically, Senator Gillibrand's legislation would provide businesses a tax cut worth 15 percent of the cost of a new job. Small businesses would receive an additional 5 percent allowing them to deduct (Next Col.) additional 5 percent, allowing them to deduct (Next Col.)

payroll increase over the previous year, meaning companies would also have an incentive to expand part-time workers to full-time, or eliminate salary cuts instituted during the downturn. This would also provide protection against fraud by preventing employees from doing things like firing and re-hiring employ-ees to claim the tax cut. The legislation would also contain additional protections against abuse by including protections such as limiting the tax cut claimed by any one firm to $350,000, and exclusions for mergers or acquisition where no new jobs are actually created.

With the right safeguards, Senator Gillibrand's job creation tax cut is one of the most efficient ways to create a large number of jobs quickly. It would address what is perhaps the most persistent and harmful aspect of the economic downturn; unemployment. Such a measure not only is an efficient way to create a large number of jobs quickly, but also bolster long-term economic recovery investments -- from high-speed rail and health care information technology, to rural broadband and a smart energy grid.

Denning Democrats

The Town of Denning Democratic committee comment on the local scene;

Ulster County Comptroller Elliott Auerbach kicked off his 2010 re-election campaign to a standing room only crowd at Le Canard-Enchaine Restaurant in Kingston. See the article page one. Elliott Auerbach, who has personally supported our local residents on tough issues, has not ignored our small Town of Denning, after all, we only have the power of less then 400 votes compared to the larger towns in Ulster County with the power of thousands of votes. Thanks Elliott Auerbach for your support of our Town of Denning residents, and good luck.

On the National scene, we deserve a country where our elected officials are not bought and paid for by Big Business. But last week's Supreme Court decision in the case Citizens United vs. FEC overturned over a century of precedent and opened the floodgates for unlimited amounts of corporate money to flow into our political system. Shockingly, the court's decision may even allow foreign corporations and large multinationals to manipulate our elections. Get involved, express your opinion, and write you elected officials. Have a suggestion for the Dem committee, email,
