Half Day and Half Night

Recent years have brought about many changes, however, one thing that is consistent this time of year is the fact that summer is in its final days in the Northern hemisphere. The sun is rising later each day and setting earlier each evening as the arc of the sun shifts toward the south. Birds and but-tions spent most of their time out of doors and followed the cycles of the Sun using the sky as both clock and calendar and could easily see when the sun's path across the sky changed the location of the sunrise and sunset throughout the year. Stone circles like Stonehenge, dating back more than 3,000 years, are aligned to the Solstices and the Equinoxes.

Today, we know each equinox and solstice is an astronomical event caused by Earth's tilt on its axis and ceaseless orbit around the sun.

The Earth does not orbit upright, but is tilted on its axis by 23 1/2 degrees. Earth's Northern and Southern Hemispheres trade places in receiving the sun's light. Thus we have an equinox twice a year, spring and fall. It is when the tilt of the Earth's axis and Earth's orbit around the sun combine in such a way that the axis is inclined neither away from nor toward the sun. At the equinoxes, the sun appears overhead at noon if seen from Earth's equator. The sun will be on the celestial equator, and the celestial equator intersects all of our horizons at points due east and due west. At the equinox the sun will rise due east and set due west . If you have a chance and do go outside around sunset or sunrise and notice the location of the sun on the horizon relative to familiar landmarks. Return to the same spot a day or two later at sunrise or sunset, and continue to do so and you will notice the sun moving further and further south.

If you look up at the night sky, you will see Fomalhaut, the Autumn Star making its way across the heavens each night. You will also see the point where the Ecliptic crosses the Celestial Equator. It is presently lying in the constellation Virgo, which is one of the 12 sun signs of the zodiac. When the Sun passes this point each year, the Autumnal Equinox has occurred and nights begin to grow longer than days, and continue to do so in the Northern Hemisphere until the Winter Solstice in December when the sun appears at its lowest altitude above the horizon at noon.

The Autumn Equinox is not celebrated quite as intensely as the Winter Solstice or Midsummer Solstice, but it is a good time to get out those warm woolies, stoke up the fire and prepare for the winter ahead. Take out a little time this weekend to enjoy the last days of summer before the Autumn Equinox on Wednesday, September 23nd, a seasonal signpost of Earth's orbit around the sun!

Repurchase Deadline for Tax-Foreclosed Properties Is Now November 1 By Legislative Action Tax Auction Rescheduled to November 16-17

Monticello, NY - The 2022 Sullivan County Real Estate Tax Foreclosure Auction was rescheduled by a unanimous vote of the Legislature yesterday based upon public feedback. As a result, legislators are allowing foreclosed property owners to repurchase their properties by 5 p.m. on November 1.

"Since the redemption period had passed, we had to take legislative action in order to postpone the auction," Legislature Chairman Robert A. Doherty explained. "The Treasurer's Office and Real Property Advisory Board work diligently and scrupulously follow the law amidst sometimes gut-wrenching circumstances. We simply feel that it is in the best interests of taxpayers to provide additional opportunity to repurchase their properties."

People wishing to repurchase their foreclosed parcels must by close of business on November 1 - pay all delinquent taxes, along with a fee equal to 5% of the property's full market value, plus 10% of the current property taxes due and owing, and all closing costs necessary to transfer title from the County back to the previous owner. In addition, pursuant to the legislative resolution, those wishing to repurchase must provide proof of payment of current village (if applicable) and school taxes. Payment will only be accepted via guaranteed funds payable to the County Treasurer's Office. The exact amount due can be obtained from the Treasurer's Office by calling 845-807-0200

As a result of this legislative action, the tax auction has been pushed back from September 21-22 to November 16-17. Sullivan County Treasurer Nancy Buck urges potential bidders to register before 4 p.m. Monday, November 14 at https://aarauctions.com/servlet/Search.do?auctionId=4999. Registrants will receive a packet via email explaining the terms and conditions of the auction, along with the foreclosure process and associated liens. A bidders' seminar is available to watch online, as well.

"Interested bidders should ensure they've done their homework: personally viewed the property or properties, checked for outstanding liens and assessments like water and sewer, and are familiar with the auction terms and conditions, particularly the taxes and fees for which they will be immediately responsible upon placement of a successful bid or bids," Buck reminded.

All sales are subject to final approval by the Sullivan County Legislature.

More information can be obtained at nysauctions.com. The County Treasurer's Office also welcomes inquiries at 845-807-0200.

"The investments we announced today will make critical investments in training the next generation of nurses and health care professionals, improving public safety and providing programs for children and families," said Speaker Heastie.

Legacy Mysterious Book Report No. 6 Published April 19, 2021 Northern Heist Mysterious Book Report No. 445

by John Dwaine McKenna

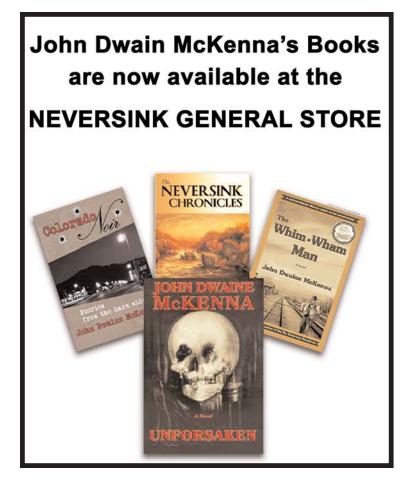

Belfast, Northern Ireland, has for decades been one of the most contentious, strife-ridden and fought-over territories in the world . . . which makes it a great place to set an electrifying crime fiction and thriller novel. Northern Heist, (Melville House, $26.99, 269 pages, ISBN 978-1-61219-903-0) by Richard O'Rawe, takes place in 2004, when a former IRA heavyweight and expert bank robber named James "Ructions" O'Hare comes up with a plan to steal truckloads of cash from the National Bank on High Street in Belfast. He figures that the haul will get them _35 to 36 million in cash, and turns to his crime boss uncle, Johnny "Panzer" O'Hare for financing. Panzer agrees, because part of the plan is to stiff the Provos, the Provisional Wing of the Irish Republican Army, who impose a fifty-percent tax on any criminal activity that takes place anywhere in the north of Ireland.

Ructions who's been sleeping with the wife of the bank manager for a couple of years, has learned all of its operational and security secrets from her. When Panzer asks if he's fallen in love with her, Ructions lies and tells his uncle 'No.' On the other hand however, when asked if his profligate son Finnbar has knowledge of the heist, Panzer also lies, and tells his nephew 'No.'

The robbery attempt goes forward, aided by several ex-paramilitary gangsters acting as tiger kidnappers and with the first of several double-crosses in place, while the police, and the IRA, both pull out all the stops, trying to catch Ructions and his uncle Panzer in the act. But in the end, a pair of trials, one in the courts, the other by the IRA, determine the outcome of this pulsating, relentlessly exciting yarn that's based on an actual unsolved robbery that nearly derailed the Good Friday Peace Accord of 1998... the agreement which halted the 'Troubles' and stopped the sectarian violence that had plagued the area for nearly four decades.

The novel's spot-on accuracy is informed by Mr. O'Rawe's own experiences, first as an IRA operative, and then as an inmate in the infamous Long Kesh Prison. He's the real deal, and his novel is as compelling as it is fascinating!

the Olive Jar by Carol Olsen LaMonda

We do not write enough. Especially now that we can text, call, or comment in social media in sound bites and emotions. Writing out our thoughts allows us to think deeper and explore related feelings and emotions. Writing is "the inking of the thinking."

Writing could be a simple list, a journal, a letter, a log, or an essay. Centuries ago our ancestors kept A Day Book that would record the weather, purchases, births, deaths, and events. Even the family bible had writing recording the family tree.

Nowadays our photos, our communications, and certainly our preferences and emotions, are digital and transient. They are surface messages read and deleted. There are no love letters tied up with a ribbon and placed in a hope chest.

We rarely write prose, and poetry is becoming a lost art when it is poetry that can cleanse our soul and allow us to say what we really feel.

It's interesting that children love poetry like nursery rhymes and can create similes and metaphors to express exactly what they think and feel.

Writing is a catharsis. Once I can place a thought on paper, I can clear up space for new thoughts and ideas. I can let go of anger and frustration. Poetry's words do not just land on the ears; they burrow into our soul. Thomas Gray wrote, "Poetry is thoughts that breathe and words that burn.'

"Poetry 1s an echo, asking a shadow to dance.

State Grant to Continue Airport Transformation County Wins Portion of Competitive Funding

White Lake, NY - Sullivan County International Airport is receiving $18.5 million from the State to significantly renovate and expand the John "J.J." McGough Terminal.

"This is another step in this administration's commitment to making the Airport attractive and a viable asset for the future growth of the County," remarked Legislature Chairman Robert A. Doherty.

"The Airport is an incredible resource for Sullivan County, and aviation businesses, pilots and the public are taking notice of the investments we're making," noted District 7 Legislator Joe Perrello, who chaired the Legislature's Public Committee Works when these monies were applied for in 2021. "This is a hidden treasure, and we want more people stopping to see what it offers for lunch, for fuel, for tourism."

NYS Governor Kathy Hochul announced the grant yesterday as part of a larger reveal of $230 million in awards to nine airports through the State's Upstate Airport Economic Development and Revitalization Competition.

"Our upstate airports are our gateways to local economies and make lasting impressions, connecting New Yorkers and tourists to the beautiful destinations that the Empire State has to offer," Governor Hochul said. "By making critical investments to further modernize facilities across upstate New York, we are lifting upstate airports to new heights and providing a 21st century transportation experience that travelers expect and deserve." Sullivan's $18.5 million share of that $230 million will go towards a complete reimagining of the Airport's 53-year-old terminal, creating additional space for passengers, a new pilot lounge, and better views of the surrounding Catskill Mountains environment. The project will also upgrade the airport's HVAC systems and outfit the terminal building with improved insulation, along with solar panels that will provide a sustainable source of electricity for the building. Additionally, the project will install electric vehicle charging stations in the parking area.

"I thank Governor Hochul and our State officials for seeing the merit in this transformative project," County Manager Joshua Potosek stated. "We are redefining what this Airport is and can be, and this funding will play a key role in that effort."

The Scene Too -Jane Harrison

Well, I did what I said I would, I slowed down this week. No promises about next week.

Pre CoVid, there were two very successful Open Mics that really set the standard for those that came after. One was at DUTCH'S in Rock Hill, hosted by STEVEN SCHWARTZ and ANTOINE MIGLIANO. The other was DAVID ROSEN-BURG'S "MUSIC WHERE YOU LEAST EXPECT IT", in the DeFILLIPIS BAKERY in Monticello. Could he have named it better?

It was the latter I visited on Sunday. And I'm pleased to say that it is still going strong. David was somehow able to keep it going as best he could during these last few years. Even though I came very late, I was able to reconnect with two friends, CHERYL ROTH and CARMINE PACE, but to hear two new performers! BRIAN MANOWN, is a singer/guitarist out of South Fallsburg with a really nice easy style to his music. The other is a real character, MIKE RILEY, originally from Brooklyn. He's another singer/guitarist but with a real edge to his music.

And then Carmine took the mic. I was so pleased since I was positive I had missed him! As it turns out he arrived just before me. Serendipity! I've seen Carmine sing show tunes, I've seen him sing Rat Pack standards, I've even heard him do rock and I can tell you that whatever he sings, it is on the money. Today it was in the Bluesy vein, and I'd like to think that was on my behalf.

When a performer gets up at an open mic, they are limited to two or three songs because of time constraints to give musician who shows up a turn. The first he did was GROOVE ME by KING FLOYD, followed by HEY BARTENDER by FLOYD DIXON and finishing with the great CHICAGO tune DOES ANYONE REALLY KNOW WHAT TIME IT IS? Yes, my friend CARMINE PACE can sing!!

There was a reason I wanted to go to "MUSIC WHERE YOU LEAST EXPECT IT". I heard a rumor that DeFILLIPI'S up for sale and I was feeling a little nostalgic. Depending on who buys it, both this wonderful bakery and the Open Mic may disappear completely. That same week I heard that RAFTERS in Callicoon is also up for sale. Whereas DEFILLIP'S attracted some of the best in the area (DEBBIE FISHER, JOANNA GASS, STEVE SCHWARTZ, ALAN SORENSON to name a few) and Orange County (KENNETH BOWLES, BARRY ADELMAN of MUSIC FOR HUMANITY), RAFTERS attracted from here and Pennsylvania and became as popular as the other two.

I hope you followed all of that. DUTCH'S never brought their Open Mic back after CoVid eased. With the potential of losing the other two, well, it's just sad is all.

There are, however, other venues with Open Mics that are available for these wonderful musicians to shift to.

FIRST MONDAY (of every month) at the TANGO CAFÉ in Hurleyville.

Wednesdays at THE HEARTBEAT OF GRAHAMSVILLE (seasonal).

Wednesdays at CABERNET FRANK'S in Parksville. Thursdays at THE DALE in Mountaindale.

Maybe I'll run into you at one of these! Until next time......

SUNY Sullivan Renews Longstanding Commitment to Sustainability with $9.8 Million Energy Efficiency Project

Project Includes Replacing Boilers, Geothermal Heat Pumps, and other HVAC Infrastructure and Installing Energy-Efficient Windows and Lighting

SUNY Sullivan is renewing its commitment to sustainability through a $9.8 million energy efficiency and facilities upgrade project that will bring significant cost savings to Sullivan County and cement the college's status as a model green campus in New York State.

The energy efficiency project-which includes replacing the campus's failing 22-year-old boilers and 130 geothermal heat pumps, installing high-efficiency windows, LED lighting, and other energy-saving upgrades to campus facilities-is being financed and implemented by the New York Power Authority (NYPA), which will be reimbursed by Sullivan County with matching funding from New York State through SUNY's Office for Capital Facilities Community College Capital Program.

When complete, the project will result in significant energy and cost savings for Sullivan County, reducing annual greenhouse gas emissions by nearly 400 metric tons and strengthening SUNY Sullivan's leadership in environmental sustainability and social responsibility in the Catskills region and across higher education.

New Initiative Funded through NYSERDA Grant and in Partnership with Livingston Energy Group

Loch Sheldrake, NY- As part of the College's master plan and longstanding sustainability mission, SUNY Sullivan announces the installation of four dual-port electric vehicle (EV) charging stations on campus. Funded through а New York State Energy Research and Development Authority (NYSER-DA) Charge Ready NY grant and in cooperation with Livingston Energy Group, the four dualport charging stations, each of which allows two cars to charge simultaneously, represent a substantial addition to the College's green infrastructure and commitment to supporting sustainability on campus and in the community

"We are excited to offer a new resource on campus," said SUNY Sullivan President Jay Quaintance. "Electric Vehicles (EVs) are the future and fit with the sustainability mission of the college. Having the opportunity to charge vehicles on campus is just another way that we are moving to a greener future at SUNY Sullivan."

SUNY Sullivan Sustainability Coordinator Larry Reeger said the College's 2019 master plan identified electric vehicle charging as a green infrastructure opportunity, and that the new stations support the SUNY Sullivan's commitment, through the University Global Coalition, to incorporate the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals into the College's teaching, research, operations, and partnerships.

"The new EV chargers will support the needs of our students and staff and are part of the College's effort to infuse sustainability into campus life," said Reeger.

The Level 2 EV charging stations are located in Parking Lot 2 in front of the Paul Gerry Fieldhouse and are available to students, faculty, and staff, as well as the greater community. There is a $0.25/kWh fee to use the stations, the revenue from which will be shared by SUNY Sullivan and Livingston, which financed 10 percent of the project.

The charging stations are operated using the Charge Port EV Charging mobile app, which is available on Android and Apple devices, and can be downloaded through Google Play, Apple's App Store, Livingston's website at www.solution.energy, or by scanning a QR code at the station. After creating a free account, electric vehicle drivers can access the location, select the station number, and start charging. Livingston Energy Group also offers 24/7 support through the mobile app or by calling 1-844-623-1001. A tutorial on how to access the mobile app and start a charging session can be found on the company's website: solution.energy/drivers.

Poliovirus testing will now continue to be a regular part of wastewater surveillance in Kingston and New Paltz.

"We thank the New York State Department of Health and CDC for enabling proactive testing of our wastewater. The results are reassuring, and I want to assure Ulster County residents that we are doing everything in our power to protect public health," Acting Ulster County Executive Johanna Contreras said. "Polio is preventable through safe and effective vaccination, and I strongly encourage all residents who are not vaccinated for polio to call their doctor and get vaccinated without delay."

"Polio is a highly contagious disease that was thought to have been controlled through the administration of a very safe, effective and proven vaccine. This is why the polio vaccine has been mandatory for all students attending public schools in New York State, for decades. The recent polio case that was diagnosed in New York State occurred in an unvaccinated person. In general, communicable disease outbreaks occur in those locations that have below average child vaccination rates," Commissioner Dr. Carol Smith said. "While the polio testing results for Ulster County are negative, it doesn't mean that our community is immune from polio in the long term. Getting all of your children vaccinated is the best and only way to protect them from this serious disease. We urge every person to check with their physician's office, to make sure that everyone in the family is up to date with polio, and all other essential vaccinations."

In New York State, wastewater is now being tested for the presence of the virus that causes polio. This is done by collecting wastewater samples from community wastewater treatment plants and sending them to laboratories to measure the amount of the virus in the sample. This method ensures individual privacy and anonymity because samples cannot be traced back to any individual or household. Positive results for polio detected in the wastewater only indicate that the virus is present in the community and does not indicate how many people are actually infected with the virus.

Governor Kathy Hochul issued an Executive Order on September 9th, 2022, declaring a State Disaster Emergency due to evidence of circulating poliovirus. The New York State Department of Health (NYS DOH) advises all New Yorkers who are unvaccinated, including children by 2 months of age, those who are pregnant, and people who have not completed their polio vaccine series previously to get immunized right away. Unvaccinated New Yorkers or those not up to date with immunizations who live, work, go to school in, or visit Rockland County, Orange County, New York City, Sullivan County, and Nassau County are at the highest risk of contracting paralytic disease, according to the State. There is low risk to those who are fully vaccinated.

NYS DOH advises that the inactivated polio vaccine (IPV), the only vaccine available in the United States, is safe, and contains no live virus. It protects 99 - 100 percent of people who get all recommended doses. In accordance with CDC, the polio immunization schedule by age is as follows:

o All children should get 4 doses of the polio vaccine. The first dose should be given at 6 weeks through 2 months of age, followed by one dose given at 4 months of age, 6 through 18 months old, and 4 through 6 years old.

o Adults who have only had 1 or 2 doses of the polio vaccine in the past should get the remaining 1 or 2 doses - it does not matter how long it has been since the earlier doses.

o In addition, adults who live or work in the areas where poliovirus has been detected (Rockland County, Orange County, New York City, Sullivan County, and Nassau County) and don't believe they are vaccinated should get vaccinated.

At this time, the following New Yorkers who have previously completed their polio vaccine series should receive one lifetime booster dose of IPV, per NYS DOH guidelines:

o Individuals who will or might have close contact with a person known or suspected to be infected with poliovirus or such person's household members or other close contacts.

o Healthcare providers working in areas where poliovirus has been detected (Rockland County, Orange County, Sullivan County, New York City, or Nassau County) who might handle specimens that might contain polioviruses or who treat patients who might have polio (e.g., urgent care, emergency department, neurology, virology laboratory workers).

o Individuals with occupational exposure to wastewater can consider a booster.

Town of Fallsburg is enacting the Hometown Heroes Banner Program

Fallsburg- To honor those that served, the Town of Fallsburg is enacting the Hometown Heroes Banner Program and will display the names and faces of veterans throughout all of the hamlets of our town.

This program was made possible by partnerships with the Sullivan County Division of Planning & Community Development of Sullivan County NY, YIT Foundation, Vet 2 Vet Sullivan County NY, NYSEG, and the Town of Fallsburg.

The mission of the Fallsburg Hometown Heroes Banner Program is to place banners honoring all veterans, either living or deceased, who have served in any branch of the United States Armed Forces.

The banners will be located on the major travel corridors throughout our town. Community involvement is key to the success of this program, as residents can participate and honor a family member or loved one who served their country by submitting a photo of a veteran, indicating the branch they served, and their years of service.

There are a limited number of poles locations and banners will be made on a "first come, first serve basis". Preference will be given to veterans that listed Fallsburg as their hometown on official documents.

They'll have to tug on his Heartstrings and purse strings to instill the Christmas spirit into the old miser!

FCSD's Revised Pre-K Program Begins

On the first day of classes at Benjamin Cosor Elementary School on September 7, 2022, the Pre-K staff welcomed families to the revised program. Children will be in school for a full day instead of two separate half-day sessions. A second classroom has been added that will have bi-lingual instruction in English and Spanish. Teacher Mindy Conciatori and teaching assistant Jennifer Varner

The school day begins with a brief meeting to orient students for the day. Breakfast in the classroom follows. Students will then attend "specials" such as gym and music for forty-five minutes. These classes are new to Pre-K this year.

will continue teaching the regular classroom; teacher Amy Saravia, who has taught Pre-K and Kindergarten for the past several years at BCES, and teaching assistant Tiffany Menendez, will conduct the bi-lingual class.

Classroom size will be a maximum of 18 children. The daily schedule will be the same as the rest of the school so the students can take the school bus, and, like other students, families have the option to drop-off and pick-up children.

Just after 11 AM, teachers will provide reading and English language arts until 12;30 PM. After lunch in the classroom, students return for a one hour nap. When explaining the schedule to families on the 7th, Ms. Conciatori and Ms. Saravia encouraged them to have their children bring favorite stuffies or blankets that they like to sleep with. The District will provide comfortable sleeping mats labeled for individual children.

Towards the close of the day, there is an hour of math. By 3:00 PM, it is time to pack up and prepare to leave. Since the program is new, teachers and administrative staff will be closely evaluating how this first year progresses. Parents were enthusiastic about having the children in the hands of the experienced teaching staff for the full school day.

There will be an opening reception for both exhibitions at DVAA located at 37 Main St, Narrowsburg, NY, on Friday, September 23, 2022, from 5 pm - 7 pm. The shows will be on view through Sunday, October 30. DVAA's galleries are free and open to the public; masks are recommended.

RYAN WARD "3,2,1, RING BALONEY!"

Ring toss. Whac-A-Mole. Skee-ball. Hot Shot. Water guns. Guess-my-weight. These were the classics. These were how Ryan Ward earned his first paycheck. At a certain point, outside of the obvious perils of the job, Ward began to ask himself: What exactly happens at an amusement park? He defines it as one giant social and psychological experiment where we enter into an unwritten agreement to suspend disbelief. It is a place where we form groups and watch one another willingly act out fantastical stories for pleasure, a chance to escape established reality, or simply a chance to win. A place where fact and fiction become one, and we don't really care. Glossy, colorful, tasty things are for sale, and we are along for the ride.

Ryan Ward likens the amusement park to our lives unfolding through the news, politics, social media, and, increasingly, firsthand experience. How we strain our eyes to identify truth from a lie, a good-faith intention from manipulation, an honest gesture from pure fabrication, yet these become more and more out of focus. We are in the Hall of Mirrors-the Funhouse...is there a way out?

Ryan Ward is the owner/director of the Ruffed Grouse Gallery in Narrowsburg, NY. Also, as the Curator of The Maslow Collection in Scranton, Pennsylvania he has curated numerous exhibitions including, "Forming The Maslow Collection: A Reflection on the NYC Art Scene in the 80s and 90s," "SLUFF: Visual Essays on Gilberton, PA by Alex Roth," "MAKE, BELIEVE: The Maslow Collection and the Moving Image," and "CO-OPTIC: Philadelphia-based Painters at Shepherd University." As Exhibition Director of Test Pattern Gallery, he organized diverse exhibitions of local and international artists. Ward holds an MFA from the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts. His own work explores the malleability of history through painting and installation. As the recipient of the 2014 Murray Dessner Memorial Travel Prize, he executed an in-depth investigation of curatorial methods employed at American historical sites. This research has led to various lectures as well as recent solo and group exhibitions in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, West Virginia, New Mexico, and Italy. Ward has taught at Studio Arts College International in Florence, Italy, and currently teaches drawing and painting at Marywood University.

"SUBTERRANEAN"

Ttwo artists, Jamie Kim and Francis Estrada, whose works show a narrative caught between the past and the present. Kim's figurative paintings and portraits are heavily influenced by news and media sources, traditional Korean folk-art imagery, and childhood photographs. She juxtaposes elements from her personal history with those from collective cultural memory, blending seemingly disparate elements into imaginary narratives that feel real and familiar.

Francis Estrada's multidisciplipractice nary extracts from multiple archives. From the American archival footage of its short-lived but impactful occupation of the Philippines to contemporary news imagery of statesanctioned violence under the current regime of Rodrigo Duterte. Re-interpreting historical archives within a decolonial and anti-authoritarian framework, he re-imagines the lives and times of people placed at the margins of the state.

Rashmi Viswanathan is a Modern and Contemporary Art historian who looks at how arts move across different cultural, regional, and temporal contexts. She is an Assistant Professor at the University of Hartford and lives in Brooklyn.

$1 Million in Grants Available, Application Deadline Extended to Oct. 12

New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) Commissioner Basil Seggos today announced the extension of the application deadline for DEC's Air Monitoring Capacity Building Grant to Wednesday, Oct. 12 at 3 p.m. The $1 million grant program is designed to support New York's statewide air quality and greenhouse gas mobile monitoring initiative currently underway in 10 disadvantaged communities statewide identified as having a disproportionate air pollution burden based on criteria developed by the State's Climate Justice Working Group. The communities include Buffalo/Tonawanda/Niagara Falls, Capital Region (Albany/Rensselaer/Cohoes/Watervliet), Bronx, Manhattan, Rochester, Syracuse, the Mount Vernon/Yonkers area, Brooklyn, Queens, and the Hempstead area.

"The success of DEC's statewide air monitoring initiative depends on our partnerships with groups on the ground," said Commissioner Seggos. "This funding opportunity is available to support these community partners to launch important work and initiatives in neighborhoods long overburdened by environmental pollution. I encourage eligible communities to apply for this support in the fight against air pollution and our work to combat climate change."

Eligible community-based organizations in these 10 identified communities can apply for $50,000 to $100,000 to be used for, but not limited to, developing, or strengthening existing programs focused on reducing exposure and improving public health in communities most impacted by air pollution, or supporting community engagement in the State's air monitoring program. Information about the grants can be found at DEC's website. Fact sheets and maps about each of the 10 communities can be found at DEC's website.

This grant opportunity, first announced by Governor Kathy Hochul in July, is supported by the State Environmental Protection Fund (EPF) with resources designated to environmental justice communities. Individual award amounts will range from $50,000 to $100,000. DEC is now accepting applications until Oct. 12, 2022, at 3 p.m., through the New York State Grants Gateway. Among the many environmental victories in the 2022-23 State Budget, Governor Hochul succeeded in increasing the EPF from $300 to $400 million, the highest-ever level of funding in the program's history. For more information, contact DEC's Office of Environmental Justice by email at justice@dec.ny.gov (be sure to include Community Air Monitoring Capacity Building Program in the subject line of the email), or by phone at (518) 402-8556. The question and answer period closes Sept. 28, 2022.

New York State's Nation-Leading Climate Plan

New York State's nation-leading climate agenda is the most aggressive climate and clean energy initiative in the nation, calling for an orderly and just transition to clean energy that creates jobs and continues fostering a green economy as New York State recovers from the COVID-19 pandemic. Enshrined into law through the Climate Leadership and Community Protection Act, New York is on a path to achieve its mandated goal of a zero-emission electricity sector by 2040, including 70 percent renewable energy generation by 2030, and to reach economy wide carbon neutrality. It builds on New York's unprecedented investments to ramp-up clean energy including over $35 billion in 120 large-scale renewable and transmission projects across the state, $6.8 billion to reduce buildings emissions, $1.8 billion to scale up solar, more than $1 billion for clean transportation initiatives, and over $1.6 billion in NY Green Bank commitments. Combined, these investments are supporting nearly 158,000 jobs in New York's clean energy sector in 2020, a 2,100 percent growth in the distributed solar sector since 2011 and a commitment to develop 9,000 megawatts of offshore wind by 2035. Under the Climate Act, New York will build on this progress and reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 85 percent from 1990 levels by 2050, while ensuring that at least 35 percent with a goal of 40 percent of the benefits of clean energy investments are directed to disadvantaged communities, and advance progress towards the state's 2025 energy efficiency target of reducing on-site energy consumption by 185 trillion BTUs of end-use energy savings.

DEC Announces Annual Arbor Day Poster Contest Dec. 31 Deadline for Photo and Artwork Submissions

New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) Commissioner Basil Seggos today announced the start of DEC's annual Arbor Day Poster contest. Each year, DEC's Urban and Community Forestry Program coordinates the contest to promote the value of trees in the environment and New Yorkers' lives. The winner of the contest will have their photo or artwork reproduced as the 2023 Arbor Day Poster to commemorate the holiday.

"Arbor Day reminds us to appreciate the immeasurable benefits trees provide to ecosystems, public health, and the fight against climate change," said Commissioner Seggos. "I invite all New Yorkers to highlight the beauty and importance of New York's trees with their photography and artwork."

The annual Arbor Day Poster contest is sponsored by the New York State Arbor Day Committee, which includes DEC, the Empire State Forestry Foundation, the New York State Arborist Association, State Department of Agriculture and Markets, and Sylvamo North America. DEC will accept original photograph and artwork submissions on behalf of the committee through Dec. 31, 2022. Entries must feature trees within New York State and should be sent to arborday@dec.ny.gov.

"In addition to their scenic beauty, trees provide useful wood products, help mitigate stormwater, and improve water quality," State Agriculture Commissioner Richard A. Ball said. "The Arbor Day Poster Contest is a wonderful celebration of New York's trees and their contributions to our lives."

Governor Hochul Urges New Yorkers to be Aware of Scams Tied to Federal Student Debt Relief Recent Announcement to Provide Financial Relief in Student Loans Triggers Uptick in Scams

Student Loan Borrowers are Reminded to Only Use Trusted Government Websites and Not Respond to Unsolicited Offers of Student Loan Relief

Governor Kathy Hochul today issued a warning to consumers about scammers taking advantage of the recent student debt relief plan to steal borrowers' money and personal information. Scammers are creating a sense of urgency by impersonating government agencies and promising immediate student loan relief. Borrowers are reminded that it's important to stay vigilant, well-informed and prepared for any fraud related to this new relief plan. Yesterday, Governor Hochul signed legislation to expand and simplify access to the federal Public Service Loan Forgiveness program statewide. This new legislation establishes what qualifies as full-time employment for the purposes of accessing PSLF, and allows public service employers to certify employment on behalf of workers, eliminating substantial barriers to applying for and accessing the program.

"New Yorkers work hard for every dollar they earn and the student loan forgiveness plan will be critical to helping reduce the pressures of mounting debt," Governor Hochul said. "Unfortunately, unscrupulous individuals and scammers are using this as an opportunity to take advantage of others. Today, we're putting scammers on notice: we will not let you take advantage of hard-working New Yorkers. I urge everyone to remain vigilant and stay informed to stop these bad actors in their tracks."

What You Need to Know About the Federal Student Relief Plan:

On August 24, 2022, the Biden Administration announced a three-part plan to help working and middle-class federal student loan borrowers. The plan includes:

1. A final extension of the student loan repayment pause through December 31, 2022, and loan forgiveness of up to $20,000 for qualified individuals

2. Improving the Public Service Loan Forgiveness program and creating a new income-driven repayment plan to reduce future monthly payments for lower- and middle-income borrowers.

3. Reducing the cost of college to protect future students.

The U.S. Department of Education is working quickly to implement the improvements to student loans, but many details will be forthcoming. The Department of Education recommends logging in to your StudentAid.gov account to ensure your contact information is up to date and to sign up for alerts for when new information becomes available.

How to Avoid a Student Loan Forgiveness Scams:

1. Seek trusted information and sources. Only go to ".gov" websites when seeking assistance. The U.S. Department of Education recently launched a webpage to provide borrowers with a one-stop location for accurate and up to date information about the program. Upon accessing the site, borrowers will find not only general information but also a detailed Frequently Asked Questions section that provides facts about the student debt relief plan.

2. Don't trust any person or program who promises you early or special access, or guaranteed eligibility. You might be contacted by a company saying they will help you get loan discharge, forgiveness, cancellation, or debt relief for a fee. They may also offer to help you apply early. The loan forgiveness application will launch in early October and early access is not possible, and you never have to pay for help with your federal student aid. If you receive any of these offers, it's a scam.

3. Don't give your personal information, Federal Student Aid ID or social security number to anyone who contacts you. Nobody from the Department of Education will be calling you or texting you about this initiative. Make sure you work only with the U.S. Department of Education, and never reveal your personal information or account password to anyone. Genuine emails to borrowers will only come from noreply@studentaid.gov.

4. If you encounter a scam, report it. Contact the official Federal Student Aid website to file a complaint, or contact the Federal Trade Commission. The U.S. Department of Education offers additional tips and resources here.

Secretary of State Robert J. Rodriguez said, "As many New Yorkers struggle to pay back their student loans, scammers are preying upon these borrowers in desperate need of immediate student loan relief. (Contd. Pg. 35)

Monticello, NY - In a major expansion by the Sullivan County Legislature of a three-year-old program, Move Sullivan buses are now providing service to 18 new stops and 8 communities, in addition to the existing two dozen stops across 10 locations.

"From launching two new routes to providing every ride at no cost to passengers, Sullivan County is serious about making this work," affirmed County Manager Joshua Potosek. "I think it's one of the most worthwhile new projects we've undertaken, and I thank the Legislature for supporting its growth."

"The creation of Move Sullivan in 2019 marked the beginning of an effort to transform the lives of people who otherwise would find it incredibly challenging just to get across town," added Division of Community Resources Commissioner Laura Quigley, who spearheaded the launch of the service. "I'm proud to say we've done just that making it possible for anyone to get to their jobs, their healthcare providers, and their local merchants."

EXHIBITION EXPOSÉ By Christian Katti

"Everything is in flux" Heraclitus The projected and fourth exhibition by Jörg Madlener comes as highlight of a successful series of previous art shows in Saerbeck's Bioenergiepark, a state-of-the-art bio-energy production site in northern Germany. Human being as a part of "nature" as well as "zoon politikon" (Aristotle), as a "political and cultural" creature stands at the center of the exhibition in a confrontational way. Nature dwells in conflict with the darkest shadows of politics, violence, and mourning. The side of nature is presented by a new series of paintings that follow a North American river in the color play of seasonal change. For a long time, Jörg Madlener's studio has been located along this river in the Catskills (Upstate New York). The river is also a metaphor of existence. The flow of time and the fluidity of human perception between representation and abstraction have long since broken away from pastoral notions of landscape. According to Heraclitus, no one steps into the same river twice since everything is in flux. In our Earth Age, humans are becoming the dominant influence on the Earth's biological, geological, and atmospheric processes - in the "Anthropocene," nature reveals itself as a threatened being. In confrontation with this understanding of nature - more urgent than ever in times of climate change and global warming - are the consequences of war and suffering. These consequences result from human and political actions - even if the suffering associated with them seems "inhuman." Although our agency is used to justify itself as "rational," its consequences appear to be "irrational." Yet we bear responsibility of our actions in this political and historical world - just as we bear responsibility for the way we treat and exploit nature. The core of the exhibition works through this great confrontation between nature versus war, violence, and suffering, a confrontation that can neither be fixed or resolved nor simply conceptualized. The tension between the flow - the river, the change of nature, the flow of time, perception and its identity-forming power - and the shadows of war, suffering, and mourning, one of the deepest experiences and injuries of the human soul, is built up in the exhibition by two distinct blocks of work, held out and opened up to different perspectives without being able to be resolved, even where the confrontation remains in apparent distance, where it attempts rapprochements, or persists in ignorant opposition. In the artistic medium of (re)presentation arise correspondences, intersections, open contrasts, or appropriations. In these tensions the means and media of (re)presentation are reflected in themselves: painting and watercolor emulsion, drawing and painterly gesture, paper and canvas, color, contour, texture, action and emptiness, abstraction and representation, the day and night sides of nature and history, of perception and politics, of present and past. The aesthetic confrontation and its presentation open a range of questions: are violence and cruelty an anthropological constant? How can history be thought without warfare? How can nature and culture be brought into a friendly relationship, and how do we have to renew ourselves, our ideas, and concepts for all of this? What might be the political dimension of mourning or a practical dimension in opposition or accordance to the sublime? The two thematic blocks and their confrontation seem to be distinctly made for the city of Saerbeck. The concrete bunkers as exhibition space correspond with the dark sides of war and politics, yet they form an ideal presentation site. As certified "Climate Community" with pioneering status, the change in ideas about nature is also naturally at home in Saerbeck, as is the technological progress of climate-friendly energy generation. The wellestablished cooperation of Jörg Madlener as an internationally renowned artist with the municipality leads us to expect a more than promising exhibition. The show is curated by Christian Katti who already conceived a show in 2021 in Saerbeck together with the artist in preparation for the upcoming event.

Some of the bunkers are to be transformed by then, together with adapted infrastructure, for cultural and related event activities. The exhibition under the title "see you down the river" - Existence in flux is the set off for this long-term development, which will be jointly driven forward with architectural interventions, urban planning, sponsorship, new mobility concepts, marketing, and climate-friendly energy policy. May these things and more start flowing and getting in flux in the near future, and we look forward to "seeing you down the river" here soon.

Gillibrand Calls on Biden Administration to Swiftly Implement Debt Relief Provisions for Small Farmers Passed in the IRA

• New York Is Home To More Than 30,000 Farms; Inflation Reduction Act Will Provide Desperately Needed Debt Relief To Struggling Farmers

• As of 2019, New York Farmers Held More Than $160 Million In Debt

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Today, U.S. Senator Kirsten Gillibrand held a video press conferencing announcing her letter to U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) Secretary Tom Vilsack urging the USDA to quickly implement the small farmer debt relief provisions in the recently passed Inflation Reduction Act. The historic bill includes $3.1 billion in economic relief for struggling farms, but without rapid distribution of funds, farmers burdened by loans will continue to struggle to make ends meet. Gillibrand sent this letter with U.S. Representative Sean Patrick Maloney (NY-18). The members are calling on the USDA to immediately clarify eligibility guidelines for debt relief and provide relief to as many economically distressed small farmers in New York State as possible.

"The Inflation Reduction Act takes critical steps to help relieve small farmers' crushing debt, but they can't afford to wait weeks or months for relief," said Senator Gillibrand. "I urge Secretary Vilsack to act now to clarify the eligibility guidelines for debt forgiveness so that farmers can get the help they need as soon as possible. Small farmers form the backbone of our rural communities and we have to do more to ensure that they have the support they need to stay in business."

"Small family farmers like those in the Black Dirt region of the Hudson Valley are pillars of our communities and the backbone of America's agricultural industry. Despite their critical importance, small farmers face more challenges than ever and have often been forced to take on unrealistic amounts of debt to keep their farms operational. That's why I've been working directly with farmers across the Hudson Valley to ensure they get the help they need to continue their work for generations to come," said Representative Maloney. "Today, Senator Gillibrand and I called on the US Department of Agriculture to promptly distribute the billions in debt relief we fought for in the Inflation Reduction Act to as many small farmers in New York as possible. This funding will be lifechanging for Hudson Valley farmers."

As it currently stands, the USDA needs time to design and implement a debt relief program, including the eligibility criteria. Until the program is in place, economically distressed farmers will continue to need to make loan payments, putting them at risk of defaulting or being forced to sell their farms. Gillibrand and Maloney are urging the USDA to base the eligibility criteria for IRA forgiveness on the framework included in their bill, the Relief for America's Small Farmers Act, which Gillibrand and Maloney introduced last year. The bill defines eligible borrowers as those who had an average annual adjusted gross income of $300,000 or less for the previous 5 years and was created to capture as many economically distressed farmers as possible. Using these criteria would help ensure that all farmers in need of debt relief get it soon.

Governor Hochul Urges New Yorkers to be Aware of Scams Tied to Federal Student Debt Relief Recent Announcement to Provide Financial Relief in Student Loans Triggers Uptick in Scams

(From Pg. 32) The New York State Division of Consumer Protection is reminding borrowers to only use trusted government websites and to not respond to unsolicited offers to obtain forgiveness, as student loan forgiveness scams have arisen after the recent federal goverment forgiveness announcement."

State Senator Kevin Thomas said, "It's a shame that the excitement and demand for this long-awaited Federal student debt relief has created a new window of opportunity for scammers to exploit those seeking assistance. I'm urging New Yorkers seeking assistance to remain vigilant and only use trusted ".gov" websites to access student debt relief information."

Assemblymember Harvey Epstein said, "I urge New Yorkers to be on the lookout for scams related to student loan forgiveness. As we fight to make forgiveness available to more New Yorkers, we're unfortunately seeing scammers attempting to take advantage of borrowers. The good news is there are ways to protect yourself. I applaud Governor Hochul for making student loan forgiveness a priority and protecting student borrowers from predatory scams."

Free Car Seat Fittings Offered at Locations Statewide

- Car Seat Checks Ensure a Correct Fit and Proper Installation
- Free Fittings Offered by Appointment Year-Round

Governor Kathy Hochul and the Governor's Traffic Safety Committee today announced that free child car seat checks by certified child passenger safety technicians will be available across the state during Child Passenger Safety Week, which starts today and concludes with National Seat Check Saturday on September 24, 2022. The events are part of a yearlong safety initiative in which state and local law enforcement agencies, together with various community safety partners, offer free fittings.

"Keeping kids safe on the road starts with making sure they have an appropriate booster or car seat, Governor Hochul said. "New York has always and will always put the safety of our children first, and I encourage parents and caregivers to take advantage of this free opportunity to ensure their children are properly protected on our roadways." According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), in 2020, 755 children were killed in traffic crashes, and 42 percent of those children were unrestrained. That same year, an estimated 380 were injured every day in traffic cashes while riding in cars, SUVs, pickups, and vans. (Contd. Pg. 40)

(From Pg. 39) New York State Department of Motor Vehicles Commissioner and GTSC Chair Mark J.F. Schroeder said, "Motor vehicle crashes are a leading cause of death for children, but correctly using a car seat, booster seat or seat belt is the most effective way to keep them safe while on the road. Providing parents and caregivers with safety information and training on how to properly install and use a child safety seat is crucial to protecting young lives on our roadways."

According to NHTSA, when used correctly, car seats reduce the risk of fatal injury by 71 percent for infants (younger than one year old) and by 54 percent for toddlers (one to four years old) in passenger cars. While most parents believe they have properly installed their child's car seat, the seats were installed incorrectly in 46 percent of cases.

Trained technicians will use the model of "Learn, Practice, and Explain" to educate caregivers on how to select a child restraint that will fit their child, fit their vehicle and be used correctly every time.

Parents and caregivers can find free Child Passenger Safety Week car seat check events in their region or make an appointment at a year-round regional car seat fitting site.

In addition to car seat fittings, parents and caregivers can view a series of videos produced by NHSTA on proper installation of rear-facing and forward-facing car seats and booster seats. NHTSA also offers information on registering a car seat, finding the right car seat based on a child's age and size and see ratings on all car seats.

Governor Hochul Signs Legislation to Expand Public Servants' Access to Student Loan Forgiveness

Governor Kathy Hochul today signed legislation to expand and simplify access to the federal Public Service Loan Forgiveness program statewide. The new legislation establishes uniformity around what qualifies as full-time employment for the purposes of accessing PSLF and allows public service employers to certify employment on behalf of workers, eliminating substantial barriers to applying for and accessing PSLF.

"If you spend your days working for the people of New York, you shouldn't spend your nights worrying about how to pay us back. This legislation acknowledges the significant contributions of our public servants, first responders, educators and more, by helping unlock federal loan forgiveness for countless members of New York's workforce," Governor Hochul said. "From the workers who ushered us through the pandemic to the everyday heroes who keep New York moving, public-sector and not-for-profit workers deserve to make the most of this benefit - but without headaches, delays, or confusion. I'm proud to sign this legislation that ensures public servants have the clarity and the support they need to access federal loan forgiveness, and I thank my partners in the Legislature for their thoughtfulness on this bill."

PSLF is a federal program that rewards and incentivizes public service work by cancelling a portion of borrowers' federal student loans. The program requires borrowers to be full-time employees of an eligible public service employer and make 120 qualifying payments towards their student loan, after which the remainder of their federal student loan debt is forgiven. Any student loan debt that is forgiven under this program will not be subject to tax under New York State tax law. (Contd. Pg. 46)

Record Levels of Federal Funding Available to States This Year through FEMA's Building Resilient Infrastructure and Communities and Flood Mitigation Assistance Grant Programs

• State Division of Homeland Security and Emergency Services to Work with Interested Local Governments and Eligible Nonprofits to Apply for Newly Available Hazard Mitigation Funding

• Encourages New Yorkers To Assess Personal Preparedness During National Preparedness Month in September

Governor Kathy Hochul today announced that state agencies, counties, cities, towns, villages and tribal governments throughout New York State can now apply for new funding to support initiatives designed to boost resiliency and mitigate the effects of climate change, including the threats of flash flooding, wildfires and hurricanes. This year, FEMA will make up to $2.295 billion available to states through the Building Resilient Infrastructure and Communities grant program and up to $800 million through the Flood Mitigation Assistance grant program. As September marks National Preparedness Month, Governor Hochul also encouraged New Yorkers to assess their own personal preparedness so they can remain safe before, during and after a disaster.

"We have seen the devastating impacts of climate change and extreme weather far too often in New York State, and in response we are preparing for the future," Governor Hochul said. "My administration will continue to invest in resiliency measures across the state to ensure our infrastructure can withstand the next so-called hundred-year storm, and I encourage all of our local government partners to apply for this critical funding."

The Building Resilient Infrastructure and Communities (BRIC) and Flood Mitigation Assistance (FMA) funding programs are nationally competitive mitigation grants which prioritize projects that promote natural risk reduction to public infrastructure and disadvantaged communities, as well as solutions that work towards enhancing climate resilience and reducing carbon emissions.

Building Resilient Infrastructure and Communities (BRIC) funds may be used for:

- o Capability and capacity building (C&CB) activities
- o Mitigation projects
- o Management costs

Flood Mitigation Assistance (FMA) funds may be used for projects that reduce or eliminate the risk of repetitive flood damage to buildings insured by the National Flood Insurance Program including:

- o Project Scoping
- o Technical Assistance
- o Community Flood Mitigation Projects

o Individual Structure/Property-Level Flood Mitigation Projects

o Management Costs

Division of Homeland Security and Emergency Services Commissioner Jackie Bray said, "The weather of yesterday is no longer the weather of tomorrow. Governor Hochul is leading the fight against climate change here in New York State and we are proud to work hand in glove with local communities to enhance our resiliency, protect our infrastructure and keep New Yorkers safe from the devastating impacts of extreme weather."

The state Division of Homeland Security and Emergency Services (DHSES) will review the applications from eligible subapplicants and assist with any questions on the process. DHSES has scheduled a series of informational webinars about the BRIC and FMA programs for sub-applicants:

- o 2 p.m. to 3 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 20
- o 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. Wednesday, Sept. 28
- o 11 a.m. to Noon, Tuesday, Oct. 4
- o 3 p.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 12
 - Noon to 1 p.m., Tuesday, Oct. 18

Visit dhses.ny.gov/recovery to register or contact DHSES' Hazard Mitigation Office at HazardMitigation@dhses.ny.gov for more information. Applicants also may register for FEMA webinars to learn more.

DHSES is requesting that applications be submitted by Wednesday, Nov. 9, 2022.

Governor Hochul and Commissioner Bray also recently announced the return of the New York State Citizen Preparedness Corps training courses, which promote personal preparedness and provide New Yorkers with information and tools necessary to prepare and plan for any disaster that may impact New York State.

New Yorkers can find the current training schedule and register for courses online or request a training in their area by sending an email to: NY.Prepare@dhses.ny.gov.

Preparedness Tips

o Sign up for emergency alerts in your area by registering with NY-Alert, a free service that provides critical emergency information via email, phone call or text message.

o Learn the quickest route from your home or business to a safe area, should you have to leave in a hurry.

o Develop and practice a 'family escape' plan and identify a meeting place if family members become separated.

o Make an itemized list of all your valuables including furnishings, clothing and other personal property. Keep the list in a safe place.

o Stockpile emergency supplies of canned food, medicine and first aid supplies and drinking water. Store drinking water in clean, closed containers.

o Plan what to do with your pets during an emergency.

o Keep your vehicle fueled or charged. If electric power is cut off, gasoline stations may not be able to pump fuel for several days. Have a small disaster supply kit in the trunk of your car.

Prepare an emergency kit with the following items:

- o Flashlight and extra batteries
- o Battery-operated radio and extra batteries
- o First aid kit and manual
- o Emergency food and water
- o Non-electric can opener
- o A seven- to 10-day supply of essential medicines
- o Checkbook, cash, credit cards, etc.

Senator Chuck Schumer said, "New York is on the frontlines of climate change impacts, from increased flooding to wildfires to extreme weather, and we need to invest in more resilient infrastructure now so that families do not have live in fear of what the next storm could bring. That is why I am proud to deliver this $3 billion federal investment, in part funded by the Bipartisan Infrastructure And Jobs Law, to help our communities build back stronger and keep people safe from disaster. This funding is the lifeline our most vulnerable communities need to get shovels in the ground for long overdue projects that will save lives and protect homes and businesses."

Governor Hochul Signs Legislation to Expand Public Servants' Access to Student Loan Forgiveness

(From Pg. 40) Currently, approximately 2.7 million people in New York work in the public or nonprofit sectors. Since 2007, the transformative PSLF program has helped eligible public service workers receive an average of $61,402 in debt relief providing public servants the opportunity to spend on a mortgage, monthly payments for a car, basic necessities like groceries and gas.

Legislation (S.8389-C/A.9523-B) addresses several well-documented barriers to accessing PSLF by:

o Clarifying the legal definitions of key terms such as, "certifying employment," "employee," "full-time," "public service employer," "public service loan forgiveness form," and "Public service loan forgiveness program;"

o Setting a standard hourly threshold for full-time employment at thirty (30) hours per week for the purposes of accessing PSLF and clarifying standardized prep time to be included in such calculation for faculty and teachers; and o Allowing public service employers to certify employment on behalf of individuals or groups of employees directly with the U.S. Department of Education.

On October 6, 2021, the Department of Education announced time-limited changes to the PSLF program to make it easier for eligible borrowers to have their federal loans forgiven ("PSLF Waiver"). The PSLF Waiver allows borrowers to count payments made on all federal loan programs or repayment plans toward forgiveness, including loan types and payment plans that were not previously eligible. New Yorkers working in public service - in government or at a notfor-profit - with outstanding student loans may be eligible for forgiveness under the PSLF Waiver even if they were previously denied. Borrowers only have until October 31, 2022, to take advantage of the PSLF Waiver.

Governor Hochul also announced a statewide effort to inform New Yorkers of the PSLF Waiver and encourage eligible workers to apply for loan forgiveness before the end of the PSLF Waiver period. The Department of Financial Services (DFS) has secured commitments from organizations representing more than 8,500 public and not-for-profit employers to distribute information to their workforces in the coming weeks and assist them in applying to the PSLF program before the Waiver expires. Groups joining this outreach pledge include the United Federation of Teachers, Human Services Council, Nonprofit New York, New York Council of Nonprofits, New York Conference of Mayors, and NYS Association of Counties. DFS will also be offering PSLF workshops across the state in the coming weeks. These efforts build on New York's commitment to supporting student loan borrowers.

In August, based on trends identified in DFS examinations of student loan servicers, the Department issued first-in-the-nation guidance outlining expectations for informing borrowers about the PSLF program and best practices to follow. New Yorkers can visit dfs.ny.gov to learn more.

Senator Chuck Schumer said, "For too long student debt has been an anchor on young people and families, weighing them down in nearly every aspect of life. That is why I fought nonstop for years to convince President Biden to give millions of Americans the relief they need to realize their full potential and keep our economy growing. The positive impacts of this move will be felt across New York and the nation, particularly in minority communities, with at least $16 billion being put back into working families' wallets in the Empire State. Governor Hochul's bold action today will help ensure every eligible New Yorker is able to get access this critical federal relief and take advantage of the public service loan forgiveness programs to remove this anchor, help rebuild the middle class, and give people the debt-free future they deserve."

DOJ Must Enforce Key Election Integrity Laws

The Civil Rights Act of 1960 requires state and local election agencies to retain documents from all federal elections for a period of 22 months. However, a recently released report revealed that despite the records retention requirement under the Civil Rights Act, many of the most populous jurisdictions across the country are not complying with it. In fact, just six of 100 of the most heavily populated counties were able to provide their actual voter files from the 2020 election as required by law when they were requested! Further, those six jurisdictions that did provide these records demonstrated an average difference between the number of voters and the number of votes cast of 2.89%. Cobb County, Georgia had a discrepancy as high as 8.8%.

In response to this concerning report, I sent a letter to U.S. Attorney General (AG) Merrick Garland demanding his agency enforce the record retention requirements under the Civil Rights Act of 1960. I was joined in this effort by fellow New York Congresswoman Elise Stefanik as well as Reps. Bill Posey, Andrew Garbarino, Michael Guest, and Louie Gohmert.

AG Garland must act to hold these counties accountable for their failure to comply with record-keeping requirements in the 2020 election and act to ensure this important federal law is being enforced today. All states are now on notice, in 2022, this vital information must be preserved in accordance with the law!

UPDATE: Farm Overtime Wage Threshold

This week, I cosponsored H.R. 8756, the Protect Local Farms Act, to prevent the recent recommendation from the New York State Farm Laborers Wage Board to lower the overtime threshold from 60 hours to 40 hours per week from taking effect. Congressman Chris Jacobs (NY-27) introduced the legislation, and Congresswoman Elise Stefanik (NY-21) is also a cosponsor.

The decision to recommend lowering the farm worker overtime threshold from 60 to 40 hours per week is woefully misguided and ignores input from important industry stakeholders. Family farms, who are already struggling with rising costs from diesel to fertilizer and more, could be forced to reduce operations or leave the industry or state altogether. The Board completely failed to consider the overwhelming and passionate comments from farmers, consumers, and farm workers themselves in formulating their policy priorities, deciding to undermine the very industry and workers they are supposed to serve. I am honored to stand up for New York's family farms.

Demanding Answers from Credit Card Companies About Recent Changes Impacting Gun Purchases

This week, I joined with Congersswoman Elise Stefanik and more than 100 of my colleagues in demanding answers from Visa, Mastercard, and American Express about their implementation of a new Merchant Category Code (MCC) for firearms retailers. Anti-Second Amendment advocates have long advocated for a specific MCC for firearms retailers so that credit card companies can flag what they deem to be "suspicious" purchases, potentially infringing on the Second Amendment rights of law-abiding Americans.

As background, on September 9, 2022, the International Organization of Standardization (ISO) announced the creation of a new MCC for firearms retailers. Since then, major credit card companies, including Visa, Mastercard, and American Express, have announced intentions to adopt the new MCC. With the adoption of the code, liberal elected officials are now urging credit card companies to flag "suspicious" transactions on firearm sales and to file these with law enforcement. This decision by the ISO sets a dangerous precedent, and how credit card companies implement this new MCC will have a great effect on how these transactions are reviewed and flagged for further government scrutiny.

As we wrote in our letters, "Of course, there is no accepted, consistent, scientific, or legitimate way to determine from this data what is and what is not a 'suspicious' purchase. A gun control advocate could view any desire to own or obtain a firearm as per se suspicious. Instead, this is a transparent attempt to chill the exercise of constitutionally protected rights and to circumvent existing legal restrictions on the creation of firearm registries by the government."

Dangerous Iranian Officials Should Never Be Allowed in the U.S.

On Friday, I introduced the Strengthening Entry Visa Enforcement and Restrictions Act, or SEVER Act, to ban Iranian President Ebrahim Raisi and other officials associated with the Iranian Supreme Leader from entering the United States. This was done in advance of Raisi's arrival for a meeting of the United Nations General Assembly (UNGA).

Amid ongoing talks to restore the failed Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA), also known as the Iran Nuclear Deal, the Biden administration is planning to circumvent restrictions that would bar Raisi from entering the U.S. because of mass atrocities he has committed and terrorist activities that he has directed. Raisi has advocated for the assassination of U.S. officials, including former President Donald Trump and former Secretary of State Mike Pompeo. (Contd. Pg. 57) THE TOWNSMAN

Standing for America's Small Business Community

This week, I had the privilege of receiving the "Guardian of Small Business" Award from the National Federation of Independent Business (NFIB) for my work in supporting Congress America's small businesses. NFIB advocates on behalf of America's small and independent businesses, both in Washington and throughout the 50 states. The "Guardian of Small Business" Award is the organization's most prestigious legislative award and is presented to lawmakers who consistently vote to support small businesses on key issues.

It was my honor to receive this award from NFIB. As a longtime small business owner and member of NFIB for nearly 30 years, I am committed to giving a voice to America's small business owners in Congress. 94% of workers in New York's 22nd District are employed by small businesses, which truly are the backbone of our local and state economies.

DEC Reports First Detection of Bluetongue Virus in New York Deer

• Additional Cases of Epizootic Hemorrhagic Disease in Deer in Suffolk and Rensselaer Counties

• Diseases Not Transmissible to Humans or Pets; New Yorkers Encouraged to Report Sick or Dead Deer

The New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) today reported three deer in Southampton, Suffolk County, tested positive for bluetongue, which is closely related to the Epizootic Hemorrhagic Disease (EHD) virus and is transmitted in the same way. This is the first time the bluetongue (BT) virus was detected in New York deer. It was detected in several other mid-Atlantic coast states this year.

DEC also reported that two white-tailed deer in the town of Schodack, Rensselaer County, found dead in late August, and one deer in Southampton, Suffolk County, confirmed positive for EHD. These are in addition to two deer in the town of Dover Plains, Dutchess County, that died from EHD in mid-August.

EHD virus and BT virus are often fatal to deer. They are transmitted by biting midges (likely Culicoides sp.), small bugs often called "no-see-ums." EHD and BT outbreaks are most common in late summer and early fall when midges are abundant. Diseases caused by the viruses are usually not spread directly from deer to deer, and humans cannot be infected by deer or bites from midges.

EHD and BT cause similar symptoms in deer including fever, difficulty breathing, dehydration, swelling of the head neck and tongue, attraction to water, and rapid death. Frequently, infected deer will seek out water sources and many succumb in or near a water source. Once clinical signs of EHD or BT infection are apparent, deer usually die within 36 hours.

There is no treatment or means to prevent EHD or BT in free-ranging deer. The dead deer do not serve as a source of infection for other animals. Both EHD and BT can infect cattle and sheep; cattle seldom exhibit signs of disease, but sheep can suffer severe disease and death from BT infection.

The EHD virus was first confirmed in New York in 2007 with relatively small outbreaks in Albany, Rensselaer, and Niagara counties, and in Rockland County in 2011. In 2020, a large EHD outbreak occurred in the lower Hudson Valley, centered in Putnam and Orange counties, with reports from the public of approximately 1,500 dead deer. In 2021 the outbreak shifted and DEC received more than 2,000 reports of dead deer primarily in Ulster, Dutchess, Columbia, Oswego, and Jefferson counties.

EHD and BT outbreaks do not have a significant long-term effect on deer populations, but deer mortality can be intense in small geographic areas. EHD is endemic in the southern states where there are annual outbreaks, so some southern deer have developed immunity. In the northeast, EHD outbreaks occur sporadically and deer in New York have little or no immunity to this virus. Consequently, most EHD-infected deer in New York are expected to die. In the north, the first hard frost kills the midges that transmit the disease, ending the EHD and BT outbreak.

Sightings of sick or dying deer should be reported online (leaves DEC website) or to the nearest DEC Regional Office or Environmental Conservation Police Officer. More information about EHD and a link for public reporting of deer with EHD symptoms is at DEC's website. DEC may collect samples from deer and analyze data from deer reports to determine the extent of the outbreak.

For more information, visit Cornell University's Wildlife Health Lab website (leaves DEC website). https://cwhl.vet.cornell.edu/disease/epizootic-hemorrhagic-disease

Governor Hochul Announces Progress Toward Implementing Utility Thermal Energy Network and Jobs Act to Reduce Greenhouse Gas Emmissions

Governor Kathy Hochul announced that the New York State Public Service Commission initiated a proceeding to implement the Utility Thermal Energy Network and Jobs Act, which will advance efforts to decarbonize buildings across the state. Implementation of this law will reduce greenhouse gas emissions by allowing for the creation of utility-scale infrastructure projects that connect multiple buildings into a shared thermal network. Utility thermal networks present an opportunity for utilities to provide thermal energy to customers rather than fossilbased natural gas to meet their space heating, water heating, and cooling needs.

"Ahead of Climate Week, New York is taking a bold step to further support the use of clean-energy technology," Governor Hochul said. "Buildings are the largest source of greenhouse gas emissions in New York State - accounting for 32 percent of overall emissions - and the Utility Thermal Energy Network and Jobs Act will help significantly reduce climate change emissions and create greener, healthier places to live and work across the Empire State."

In addition to creating the regulatory framework for the thermal energy network, the New York Public Services Commission (PSC) will work to ensure the development of and access to welltrained, highly skilled trade persons needed to support timely, reliable, high-quality thermal energy network projects and promotes good jobs for New Yorkers in the expanding decarbonization sector.

As part of this process, the PSC will require the seven largest, investor-owned utilities - Consolidated Edison Company of New York, Inc., Orange and Rockland Utilities, Inc., New York State Electric & Gas Corporation, Rochester Gas and Electric Corporation, National Grid USA (Niagara Mohawk Power Corporation d/b/a National Grid, The Brooklyn Union Gas Company d/b/a National Grid NY, and KeySpan Gas East Corporation d/b/a National Grid), Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation, and National Fuel Gas Distribution Corporation - to each submit up at least one and up to five proposed thermal network pilot projects for review, with at least one pilot project located in a disadvantaged community within each utility service territory. The PSC will also establish a thermal-energy networks working group to assist the utilities in the development of pilot project proposals prior to submission to the PSC for review and to develop proposed rules and regulations for utility thermal service.

We need your help!

The Daniel Pierce Library is in search of volunteers to help us make the Giant Pumpkin Party happen! We're looking for help in many different areas including games, crafts, bouncy houses, tickets sales, pumpkin sales, food service, and much more.

One of the big attractions at the Giant Pumpkin Party is the large assortment of games that the younger children in the community love to play! The only way that we can set up these games, however, is if we can find some responsible older students and parents to run them, take tickets, and give out the prizes. We know that there are many of you who are willing to help, but finding you is not easy!

Please check out our online sign up for what's available. Volunteer Community Service letters available for students.
